Markets

Global equities rose for a sixth straight month in Apr, and opened the new month on an optimistic note, with European markets strongly up and the S&P 500 closing at a record high, while emerging markets remained almost flat. Regional markets in oil producing countries were sharply down (except Abu Dhabi) while Morocco and Egypt benefitted from a more bullish macroeconomic outlook. In currency markets the yen took a dive in response to stronger US data, while the euro held steady at a 6-month high vis à vis the dollar. Oil prices plunged as the inventories fell by a smaller than expected amount, the US output is on the rise and scepticism over Opec's ability to cut production intensifies. Gold recorded the biggest weekly drop since Trump's election, as the likely victory of Macron is expected to remove one of the most acute political risk.

Global Developments

US/Americas:

- The US non-farm payroll added 211k jobs in Apr, compared to a downwardly revised 79k in Mar. Private employment increased 194,000 with mostly in professional/business services, leisure/hospitality and education/healthcare. The unemployment rate fell to 4.4% (a 20-year low) from 4.5%, because the labour force participation rate dipped to 62.9% from 63%.
- The US Fed kept its interest rate target range at 0.75% to 1% and did not mention measures to reduce its balance sheet. The final statement remarked that private consumption rose "only modestly" lately, but emphasized that the Q1 slowdown in US growth is probably temporary

- and further rates hikes can come as soon as June.
- The ISM manufacturing index dropped from 57.2 in Mar to 54.8 in Apr. New orders plunged from 64.5 to 57.5 and the employment index from 58.9 to 52. The trade details suggest net exports could be holding down the Q2 GDP.US ISM non-manufacturing PMI index went up to 57.5 in Apr of 2017 from 55.2 in Mar.
- The US PCE deflator fell -0.2% mom (1.8% yoy) vs 0.1% in Feb and 0.4% in Jan. Core PCE inflation fell -0.1% (1.6% yoy).
- Growth in nominal personal income in the US slowed to 0.2% mom in Mar from 0.3% in Feb. Wages and salary growth decelerated to 0.1% from 0.5% in Feb.
- Initial unemployment claims in the US fell 19,000 to 238,000. The 4-week moving average gained 750 units to 243,000. Continuing claims fell 23,000 to 1.964 mn.
- US nonfarm productivity fell -0.6% yoy in Q1, vs a 1.3% gain in Q4, another sign that without a shock therapy the economy will remain in a low growth range.
- The US trade deficit narrowed to USD 43.7bn in Mar, almost the same as in Feb, and the lowest in 5 months.
- US factory orders increased 0.2% mom vs 1.0% in Mar thanks to defense and nondefense aircrafts. Inventories were roughly unchanged.
- Unit labour costs in the US nonfarm business sector increased 3.0% in Q1, as a result of a 2.4% increase in hourly compensation and a -0.6% decline in productivity.
- Industrial production in Brazil fell -1.8% in Mar, after a negligible 0.1% gain in Feb, underscoring that the recovery might not be steady as anticipated.

Europe:

- The eurozone GDP gained 5% qoq in Q1 (1.7% yoy), the same pace as in Q4 (1.8% yoy) according to flash estimates.
- The Markit Eurozone Composite PMI crawled up to 56.8 in

- Apr from 56.4 in Mar a 6-year record high, signaling an acceleration of growth in Q2.
- The eurozone's unemployment rate was stable at 9.5% in Mar.
- German jobless rate was 3.9% in Feb, unchanged from Jan, and down from 4.3% a year earlier.
- The UK Markit/CIPS Services PMI rose to 55.8 in Apr from 55 in Mar, a precious sign of resilience despite the uncertainty over the Brexit.
- The Russian central bank lowered its policy rate by 75bp to 9.25% as inflation subsides to 4.1% yoy in Apr down from 4.3% in Mar, thanks to the appreciation of the ruble.
- Retail sales growth in the eurozone slowed to 0.3% mom in Mar, from 0.5% in Feb.

Asia and Pacific:

- The Nikkei Japan Manufacturing PMI rose to 52.7 in Apr, compared to 52.4 in Mar, marking the eighth straight month of expansion in manufacturing activity, driven by new export orders.
- The Caixin Manufacturing PMI in China fell to 50.3 in Apr from 51.2 in Mar the weakest level in activity since Sep 2016. The Composite PMI declined to 51.2 in Apr from 52.1 in Mar, the lowest figure since Jun 2016.
- South Korea's inflation rate declined to 1.9% yoy (-0.1% mom) in Apr from 2.2% (0.0% mom) in Mar. dragged down by transport and food costs.
- South Korea's trade surplus rose to USD 13.25bn in Apr from USD 8.7bn a year earlier.
- Indonesia's GDP shrank -0.34% qoq in the Q1 of 2017, following a -1.77% decline in Q4, and compared to market consensus of a 0.35 % fall.
- Philippines consumer prices rose 3.4% yoy in Apr, the same as in Mar.

Bottom line: Another week where most macro data (except the non farm payroll) underscored a malaise in the US economy. It suffices to note that Euroland's Q1 growth rate turned out to be double than in the US. The disruptions envisaged after Trump's elections have failed to materialize and markets baseline scenario is a prolonging of the economic conditions prevailing before Nov 8. Most analysts and the Fed seem to consider this US weakness temporary and the central bank remains on course for two hikes this year. In fact although the Fed did not signal that a second 2017 rate increase is imminent, before the FOMC meeting chances of a 25bps rise in June were at 67%, according to Fed fund futures, but jumped to 94% afterwards. All in all, for now, the global economy continues its synchronised cyclical upswing, whilst underlying inflation remains low in most large economies. A discontinuity in the near term could come either from the fiscal reform sketched two weeks ago by the Trump's Administration (and the momentum gained after the repeal of the Obamacare) or from the launch of a more ambitious European Union after Macron's election puts the nail in the political coffin of populist and anti globalization movements. The biggest threat to the economy is the central banks' combined balance sheets now above 20% of GDP.
